Pedagogy before technology: Making educational sense of interactive whiteboards.

Much has been written about interactive whiteboards in the past few years. This talk will discuss using interactive whiteboards while having using good pedagogy in teaching. Examples of how to use the boards in classroom from primary to university will be demonstrated.

Chris Campbell is a professor at La Trobe University in Melbourne, Australia. Her research interests focus on pedagogy and technology in the elementary classroom. More recently she is investigating using Second Life with preservice education students. She is also conducting research in self regulation using online journalling as a tool. This research is focused on middle years classrooms.
